THE REAL GENTLEMAN

B. Gnanam, II M.A English

Kamaraj College (SF)

There was a boy in the village of Joyland, who never found joy in his life. His name is Santhosh. Childhood is an age of innocence. At that age, he faced many troubles. He was a brilliant student in his school, who never talked much, quite an introvert. When he entered his adulthood, his family burden fell on his shoulders. As the elder one, he had to fulfil his family's responsibilities. At the age of 20, as a young graduate he worked as a supervisor in Florida Company. With his hard work, he attained the post of a manager. His mother was a tailor and father was under coma due to an accident in his work place. He has a younger sibling, named Anand.

Santhosh did not have many friends. His silent type and attentiveness in his work made everyone to pay attention on him. Every colleague had great respect him. One of his colleagues name was Steffi.

She had two children. Her husband was an army soldier who had many friends in both genders. Steffi talked about Santhosh to her husband since she liked him very much. She wanted to make everyone happy. But she never saw Santhosh smiling, at the same time he was not angry either. Often, she tried to talk to Santhosh. Most of the time she would get one word replies from Santhosh. One day Santhosh and Steffi had an office meeting in nearby town and they travelled together. At that time, Steffi got his number. They started talking to each other. They shared a lot about each other. Both of them became good friends. Steffi felt good because he spoke so well. He shared all his childhood sufferings. They attended their meeting and returned to Joyland.

The next day morning Steffi met Santhosh in office. Steffi started a conversation as usual. But she got that same one word reply from Santhosh. She was too confused and was totally shocked. She wanted a reason for this sudden change. She tried to speak to him many times. He ignored her. She was hurt and felt depressed because of his neglect. Finally, she entered his cabin and asked him why he was ignoring her. There was silence for a minute. Santhosh replied, "If I talk to a woman, it should only be my wife." When she heard this reply from Santhosh, Steffi felt proud of Santhosh and decided not to disturb him. People who hated him in his office, portrayed him as an emotionless fellow. But having known Santhosh well Steffi thought that he is the only person who is alive with emotions. When she was talking to her husband, her husband apologised to her. She stood in an unfathomable state. Her husband told her that he felt like someone had slapped him with the sandals and felt guilty. Her husband praised Santhosh as THE REAL GENTLEMAN IN THE WORLD.
